PUBLIC COMMENT CARD : Entry # 31662

Like small pockets of old growth forest, Old Estero is quickly disappearing. The quiet backwater town is no more. There are few reminders of 'Old Florida' charm left. In our effort to keep up with our more affluent neighbors, we have cut ties with our past. Sure, we have the Koreshan - behind it's fence and entrance fee. But wouldn't it be nice, sometimes, to just walk through a patch of woods, that is solely there because it beat the odds, and still standing? I tell you - and I mean it, wholeheartedly... But try it sometime: Park your car at the end of Broadway and take a stroll through River Oaks. It may not be what you're accustomed to, and you may even have to push a few branches out of your way to get there... But when you do, and you get all the way back there by the creek, you will see the beauty of some of Old Estero's last fading shadows!

I like living here. There are still some small places I can still escape to. But too much has already been lost! Estero's boundries are bursting - and every acre counts. Maybe if this area wasn't so quick (in the first place) to fill, the Village of Estero might still have other areas to free up and use instead. Maybe there still is a spot? Maybe without River Oaks' trees... Maybe without River Oaks' Old Florida Charm... But another place close - that can be used the same way - with still, the public good in mind.

I know I'm asking a lot... But please try to take what I've said into consideration. On April 3rd, I posted my thoughts regarding your upcoming meeting on Facebook's "Estero Florida Page". You're welcomed to read it, along with the accompanying comments. And thank you for hearing me out!
